MR. W. S. F. TATUM

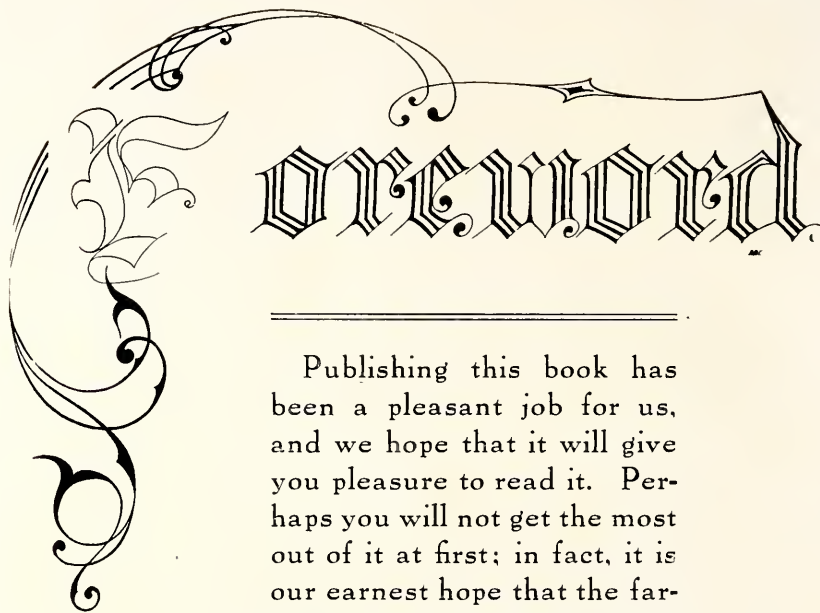

Dedication

To

W. S. F. TATUM

Whose generous spirit has brought us nearer to a realization of the Greater Millsaps for which we are working,
this book is dedicated.

Publishing this book has been a pleasant job for us, and we hope that it will give you pleasure to read it. Perhaps you will not get the most out of it at first; in fact, it is our earnest hope that the farther you get from your college days the more you will enjoy what you find herein. It is for this that we have worked, and we trust you will forgive us if we have failed.

“Millsaps”

To thee, O great Alma Mater,
We pledge allegiance true;
Our hearts we offer at thy shrine
Thy sacred fires to renew.

That those who come in after years
May feel the inspiring glow,
And upward climb ambition's heights,
Tho' beset by fears and woe.

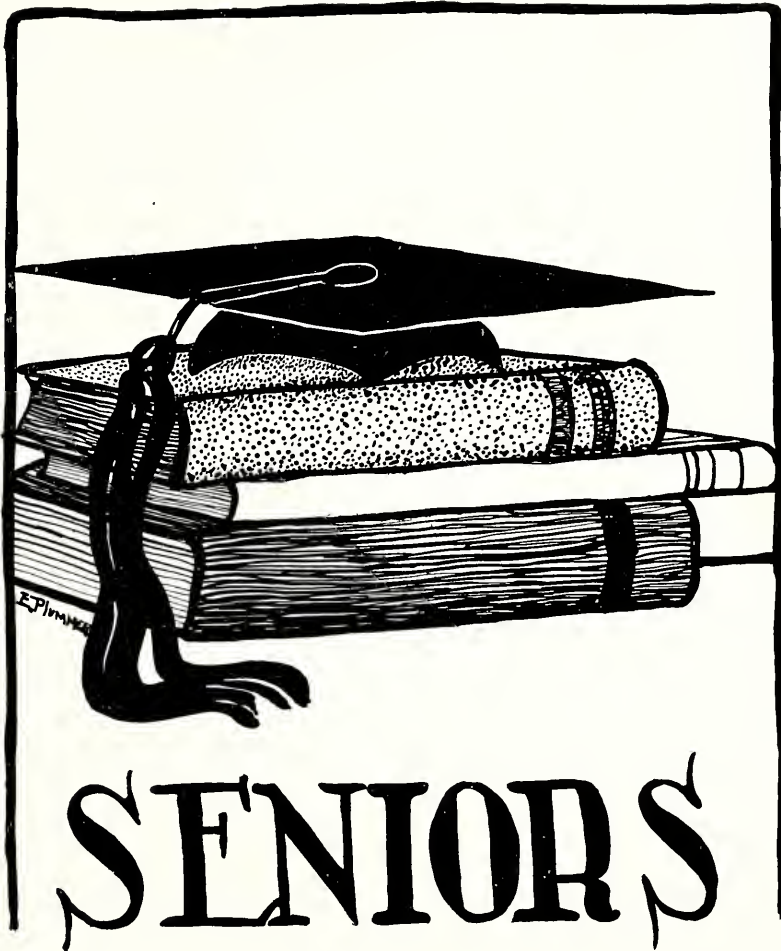

The friendships that with thee we've formed
Are ties that now bind us fast,
And 'round thy name cling memories
That with thee shall ever last.

Thou art to us a guiding star,
An influence for the best,
Shaping and moulding our beings
To meet life's supreme test.

SUMMARY

Millsaps has on its roll 21 seniors, 28 juniors, 95 sophomores, 145 freshmen, and 14 special students, making a total enrollment of 303, of which 92 are co-eds. Next year we expect to change the name of the Four Hundred Club to the Five Hundred Club, if the present rate of increase keeps up. The Greater Millsaps is near at hand.

DR. KEY

Dr. Key is the "Old Roman" of athletics at Millsaps. His jaw is set hard and his eyes flash when he talks of the "OBJECTIVES" he has in view for athletics. When athletics at Millsaps gains the great heights that he has set up as the goal, we shall not only have the best teams in the country, but will have the cleanest athletics and the most loyal student body in the world.

COACH FREELAND

Coach Freeland is recognized not only by the team and student body as being one of the best coaches in the South, but has in the short time he has been here, in spite of many handicaps, shown to the college sporting world that he is the man with the goods. He has won a place in every student's heart, not only by his success as a coach, but as a man in every sense of the word.

COURSEY

Thomas Coursey, throughout the two years he has been at Millsaps, has proved that he is a man to be counted on, and the students did not fail to make a good selection when they elected him to the responsible position of student manager. He has proved worthy of their faith in every way.

Athletics, 1921-22

THE season of 1921-22 will go down in the history of athletics at Millsaps as one full of important events, and as a season that placed athletics on the road to success. Possibly the greatest event was the coming of Coach Freeland. He came highly recommended as a coach and as a gentleman, and has lived up to his reputation in every possible way. Closely following in importance the coming of the "Big 'Un" was the remodeling of the "gym." It was Professor White's idea, and through his untiring efforts and the financial backing of the student body and faculty the "gym" was made over into the best basketball court in the state. These two additions, coupled with the fine spirit of support from the student body and the hard work of the teams, even if they failed to win many games, made this season a success.

Millsaps did well in football. Yes, we did do well in football, when everything is taken into consideration. Coach Freeland was new to the men. The men were new to him and were green in spite of the attempt we made last year in the football world. Several regular players were always cut of the game on account of injuries. We won one game, that with the State Normal. We tied the Birmingham Panthers, who later defeated the Howard Collegians, who in turn had defeated us earlier in the season. The main thing is that the team made progress. The Thanksgiving game, in which we held the University of Tennessee doctors to the close score of 14-0, proved this to the sporting world.

At the time of this writing the basketball team is not setting the world afire. Six games have been played, and the Majors have not put one in the bag yet. The lack of a court on which to practice during the first month of the season accounts for the poor showing made by the team early in the season, but from now on the Purple and White passers are expected to hit their stride and play the same brand of basketball that last year's team played when they made such a wonderful showing in the S. I. A. A. tournament held in Atlanta.

The prospects for a fast baseball team are fine. Seven of last year's team are back, and there are several among the freshmen who have made good records in high school baseball.

Tennis still continues to be a popular sport with many of the students, and if the interest increases with the coming of the spring more courts will have to be laid off.

WINDHAM, "EK" (Captain), Center

"Ek" played his usual steady game this season. There is nothing flashy about "Ek's" playing, but he is always there when it comes to putting fight into the game and playing steady football. He was mentioned for the All-State team.

FOWLER, "DUB," Halfback

During the first part of the season Fowler played a good game at half, but, owing to injuries, was kept out of the majority of the games. When it comes to natural football ability he is hard to beat.

REEVES, "BREEZIE," Fullback

Reeves had the misfortune to have to undergo an operation early in the season that kept him out of all the games except the first game with Howard. He played a great game at full last year, and had he been able to play this year the team would have been stronger.

BROOKS, End

Although new to the game of football, Brooks rapidly developed into a good tackler and has promise of making a great end. He is fast, gritty, and has a body that will meet the best of them.

McNAIR, "PAT," End

This lanky gentleman, in spite of his youth, played a great game at end. Getting down under punts and snagging difficult passes were his specialties.

CARR, "RED," Halfback

"Red's" work in the Normal College tilt showed that he had the ability to make a good broken-field runner. He suffered from an injured leg during the entire season and was never at his best. His work in the Birmingham-Southern game was excellent.

DAVENPORT, "LIGHTNING," Tackle

Although the outlook for Davenport was not bright at first, he kept plugging away and managed to get into a number of games at tackle. His defensive work was always good, and although he is not as fast as his name indicates, he managed to get in front of the enemy's offensive, and when he does something breaks up.

SCOTT, "SCOTTY," Guard

Scott will go down in history for his work in the University of Tennessee doctors' tilt, for the way in which he played against "Jitney" Ford, the renowned Kentucky giant, who played the entire game for Centre last year when they made such a wonderful showing against the great Crimson marching of Harvard. You would not have known Ford was in the game.

McEWEN, "MACK," Tackle

McEwen will always be remembered as the hero of the Panther game. He made the touchdown that tied the score with the Panthers. His work in the Mississippi game was good. It was in this game that he had the misfortune to break his leg. He was mentioned for the All-State eleven.

CAMPBELL, "JIMMIE," End

Jimmy has proven to be a utility player, having played every place on the line except center. His greatest asset is tackling and getting down under punts. The Panthers can testify to the fact. He plays hard and is game to the core.

HONEYCUTT, "PARDNER," Tackle

"Honey" did not get much start, but when the big Louisiana boy did get to hitting them he made a big impression. His playing at tackle against the Panthers was one of the features of the game.

MUSSELWHITE, "MUSSEL," Fullback

Although the backfield was new to "Mussel" (his home being at end), he rapidly developed into a good line-plunger, and his good tackling and backing the line saved the Majors' goal many times.

STOVALL, "SNOW," Tackle

Stovall was the husky who made the first touchdown of the season and, incidentally, won the hat offered by the Alumni Association when he snatched a pass and ran fifteen yards for a touchdown against the Normal College. His punting during the entire season was far above the average. Tackling and snatching passes is his "long suit."

YOUNG, J. W., "SCRAP IRON," Halfback

"Scrap Iron" proved his ability by sticking by the team throughout the season. He is light, fairly fast, and hard as nails. The scrubs were not his class, and he proved it by being shifted to the varsity in the last two games.

CULLEY, "DUD," Guard

Culley received injuries in the Howard game that kept him out of the first games of the season. It was not until the Thanksgiving game that he was able to get back into the line. Culley's faithfulness and "bull dog" tenacity make him a valuable man. He ought to have a good year next season.

GALLOWAY, "BEN," Quarterback

Galloway seems to have been the find of the season, for his passing in nearly all the games played was excellent and at times his broken-field running was flashy. "Ben's" 45-yard run against the University of Tennessee doctors was one of his best pieces of work during the season.

COMBS, Quarterback

Although working mostly with the scrubs, Combs was of great value to the team. His faithfulness and willingness showed that in spite of his size some day he will make good.

TATE, Quarterback

Working under the handicap of being very light, Tate did not get to play in many games. However, in the games he played he showed promise of making a good quarter.

FOOTBALL VIEWS

Last Year's Season

The basketball season of last year was something we should all be proud of, and we cannot help but mention the wonderful record that the team made. Besides defeating the strong team of our rivals, the Mississippi Collegians, we defeated the "Ole Miss" quintet for the first time in many years. The record that the Majors made in Atlanta will go down in the history of athletics as one of the best pieces of athletic work ever done by any Millsaps team.

The basketball team, owing to handicaps early in the season this year, has not made much of a record thus far, but since the "gym" has been finished and the team has a regular place to practice, the remainder of the season ought to be very successful.

RAMSEY, BURKS, OVERALL, COLLINS (Captain)

The only event in track that the Majors entered into this season was the Southern Methodist Road Race that was held in Atlanta this past December, in which practically all the Southern Methodist colleges were represented. The race was easily won by the team from Emory, Trinity and Millsaps making the next best scores.

Among the Great

Our President's simply angelic!
Dr. Watkins, whose first name is Alec,
Is good to the boys,
Increasing their joys,
Though he looks for the world like a relic.

We think that our college is lucky
To boast of a man we call "Ducky."
His real name is Lin,
Many friends he doth win—
He's not only witty but plucky.

And then there's the one we call Prep"—
Up at Millsaps he has quite a rep
As prof or debater;
There's really none greater—
With the first in the land he keeps step.

Dr. Key from Missouri has come,
But you'd think he'd been living in Rome.
We feel mighty weak
Reading Latin or Greek,
And wish that we'd never left home.

Wanted: A Denouement

HE white population of the island of Languria awoke with a start, as he heard a commotion in his culinary department. Languidly he got up and chased away the monkeys, which were the cur e of his South Sea home, and picked up the kitchen utensils they had knocked down. He ruefully surveyed the remains of his best gourd, the ore used only on occasions of state, but now in fragments.

J. Penfield Wellingsby shook his head with the sad air of a fish out of water. His well-formed physique, above middle height and with the muscles of a trained-down Hercules, suggested an athlete. But his bearing, dignified and erect, even after two years of eating the lotus of Languria, and his classical features, over which his inch of beard hung in a splendid tangle, would have given the impression of a hermit philosopher. A hermit he certainly was, but he had worn out philosophy, if he had ever used it at all.

"Confound the beasts, they're getting too bold! Seem to know I'm a lone bachelor without any visible means of support. I might even be driven to marrying that Muru girl, if she didn't dress her hair so low on her neck."

Lying down again, Wellingsby resumed his siesta, but his ears were soon outraged with an unusual sound. The soft, liquid atmosphere of the tropical spot was the medium which carried to his ears a sound unlike the shrill cries of the brilliant-plumaged didoes and flamingos or the dry crunching of the top-heavy waves on the sea sands. Rising up to a sitting position on his rustic cot in the open air, Wellingsby swept the matted forest with his eyes in an effort to locate the source of such a strange sound. He yawned leisurely.

"Funny noise. Sounds like those savages' war drums, but the lazy niggers wouldn't beat that fast. Anyhow, it sounds sort of like one of those airplanes they have in the comparatively enlightened countries. It's coming this way, and maybe I am doomed to entertain guests. But I'm not going to hunt trouble; it will find a beaten path to my door."

On getting near the island, the popping engine stopped and the machine swooped down toward the ground. Just before striking it straightened up, turned and hit the smooth white sand of the level beach at a slight angle. The clean, sharp sand shrieked like a seafowl, the springs of the airplane squeaked, and it bounded a few feet up in the air, came down more gently, and sped along the narrow strip of beach between the Pacific ocean and the dense forest. Then it drew up painfully to a stop. A hooded figure in knickers stepped out upon the ground.

After a careless look around, she reached back in the pilot's seat for a small leather bag, which opened with a little click. Taking off the all-enveloping hood, her face was shown as that of a girl somewhere under twenty; under the tropical sun her conveniently upturned nose became more smooth and velvety in appearance, her narrow, curved eye-lashes grew darker, and her heavenly lips took on a new, inviting hue of crimson. Then she carelessly tossed the vanity back in the seat. She walked along the beach toward the east, in the direction of a small clearing visible in the tangled forest, which began at the very edge of the naked, dazzling white beach. In the middle of the clearing she saw a rude hut of tar-paper, with a large open porch roofed with the same material. From a cot on this veranda arose a human figure, which advanced to meet her.

Nell Blanton had not grown up a flapper among flappers for nothing. She would have undertaken to out-bleat or out-butt a billy goat.

"You must be king of the Fijis," she said.

"No, madam, I am hardly ruler of myself. You have nothing to fear from any subject of mine."

"Don't worry! I don't need any protecting Sir Walter Raleigh to ward off the avenging Furies and fan mosquitoes." From a pocket of her modish riding-breeches she swiftly extracted a pocket cannon, pearl-handled, but with no notches in evidence.

"An admirer of William S. Hart, eh? I must say you are quick on the draw."

"Oh, yaas, I took drawing, music, æsthetic dancing, and Francais at boarding school. That's why I'm here now—got bored. And then it gave me such an ennui to have to go to some sticky little receptions every month. The idea of developing me by conversation with men! Why, I know the creatures so well that I skip the love scenes in a novel."

"What do you know about novels? Is it possible that you haven't been taught that it is unseemly for a young lady of looks to use her head for anything more than a rack for her bobbed hair?"

"I see you're fond of flattering. Just cut the smooth and slippery line when addressing me. Tell someone she's 'got looks' when she isn't sure she has. To appeal to a person of literary tastes, like me, you must discuss nature and politics and styles."

"Are you a literary person? Then welcome to our island! I'll attempt to do you the honors as best an humble author can. But my life has been full of inexperience, because I've always been so busy writing about women that I haven't had time to learn anything about them."

Nell's face took on a new, interested expression. She even forgot to drawl. "Are you really an author? I've met several, but the women were always ganging around so as to scare the poor creatures to death. I have always wanted to talk to one when he couldn't get away from me. What are you doing here? How large is this island?"

Wellingsby smiled with some warmth, but still with dignity. In confidential tone he explained to her: "Yes, I belong to the genus author—or is it an order, or a clan, or a disease? Sometimes I think it is the last, for never has my talent attracted to me aught but pain. Formerly my suffering was acute, but in this peaceful—oh, I beg your pardon. I forgot you were here—in this remote spot, away from the turmoil of the world, my genius gives me only a dull ache."

"Poor dear!" Nell could not help sympathizing with unfortunate creatures. "But I'm glad you got away from the noisy world—it's hard on one's nerves. And this island is just perfectly grand; it gives your big soul room to swell out and cover everything up."

"I enjoy the liberty, the sense of freedom, which I never found before coming to Languria. At times, however, I regret that I must 'blush unseen,' and strut my hour upon the stage without applause."

"It is too bad for a sure-enough author to slush unseen, unread, unmourned. Maybe sometimes your greatness gets tiresome, and you'd like some ordinary person for company. Just think how romantic it would be if you had your soul-mate with you! Just you and her, and her and you."

The man's eyes grew sad and thoughtful. "Yes, it would be pleasant to have a companion, if she was a good cook and didn't talk too much. But as for a 'soul-mate,' the laws against polygamy, which state that a man shall have a sole and only mate, are not in force here. Besides, there is no such thing as a soul-mate, except in cheap fiction by other authors of lower standards, and—"

Nell interrupted with a sharp voice: "What! Aren't you a real author, after all?"

"I guess not." Wellingsby smiled a rueful smile. "Except when I first started, the publishers all said I wasn't. And because I followed conscience, instead of catering to the public taste, I failed to make a living. That is why I am engaged in the honest but not very lucrative profession of hermit."

Now deeply interested, and in amazement, Nell asked: "What's wrong with your line that kept it from making a hit?"

"I'll tell you the trouble. I am true to life, too much so to be pleasant. I can't avoid letting my stories end as I think they would in reality. For instance, a story of adventure which I write doesn't end with the finding of the hidden treasure; it ends with a gallows scene. And a love story, instead of being finished to the sound of wedding bells, ends with either a funeral or a divorce. I had imagination, style, power, all the qualities desirable in an author, but could not end my stories in such a way as to please the reading public. When my first contract with the publishers expired, I failed to get another. Then I came here."

"About that writing, you surely do know your stuff. I feel the same way about that; it's my feeling about literature, and has been my actual experience. Years ago, when I was only sixteen, I got a crush on a man I'd never seen. He was an author, and he wrote the way I liked, so I fell in love with him. I never did find out who he really was, and all at once I stopped seeing his things. The publishers said his stuff wasn't popular, and that when his contract was out he left the field of fiction-writing. I didn't pine away and die, but I went in for all sorts of dangerous sports. Just now I'm on my way around the world in a monoplane."

Wellingsby moved a step closer to the girl, and said in a low voice: "I wrote under the pen-name of Balzac de Maupe."

For the first time in years Nell Blanton flushed. She hesitated a moment, then held out her arms in a mute appeal. Wellingsby started toward her, but she stepped back, impelled by maidenly shyness. Fortunately, she stepped upon a deadly nightshade, was bitten, and the story came to a fitting, funereal end.

Kappa Alpha

The royal road to Kappa Alpha is looks—beauty of either a masculine or feminine type. This rule relative to having a handsome mug is religiously observed, though in a few notable cases it is honored in the breach. Strangely enough, though, the handicap of brains is sometimes overlooked by this extraordinary aggregation.

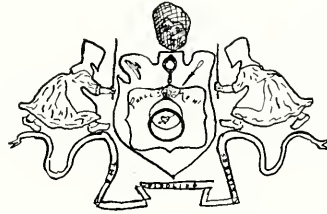

Kappa Sigma

There is no Kappa Sigma type, because they go in for variety. In this age of specialization the Sigs have athletes, students, social prodigies, and even some men who make a specialty of nothing. The brand of the Sigs is Quantity, spelled with a capital "K"—crimson letter on a field of white.

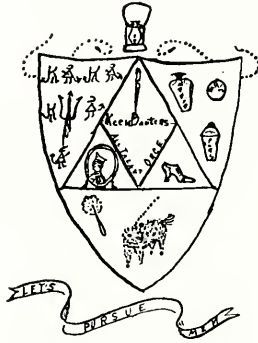

Pi Kappa Alpha

The Pi Kappa Alphas are noted for their attempts at heart-breaking and their successful busting in class work. Of course, some of the Pikes would no more think of breaking a heart than of busting in their work, but most of them think no more of busting in a subject than of breaking a heart. That their lamp of knowledge flickers so low is to be credited to an excess of society, and to aquatic sports enjoyed at the Palace, Crescent, and Pastime; also to an inherent antipathy to things bookish.

Phi Mu

Oh, the darling little Phi Mus! They are quiet and innocent in the extreme, and so gentle of spirit that they don't hate themselves at all. The Phi Mus don't care anything about boys, but they just can't keep the boys from running after them. To do them justice, though, they are not so demure and innocent as they look.

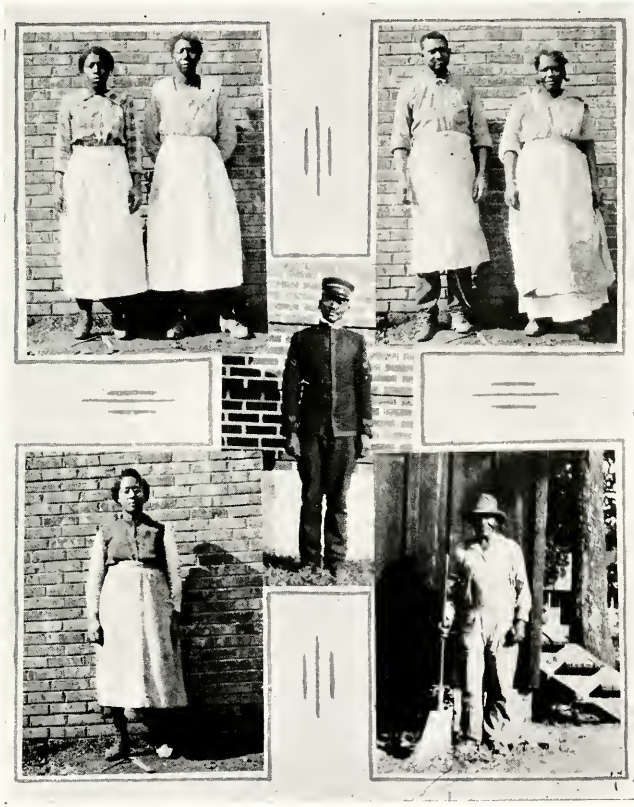

Kappa Delta

The Kappa Deltas admit in a brazenly outspoken way that they do society. The K. D.'s—we have it from a member of a rival organization—are not altogether lacking in speed. Also, the greedy things cop rather more than their share of honors in the class room.

AΘX

Alpha Theta Chi

Alpha Theta Chi gains much of its prominence from bumping one of the "nationals" for two men. Nevertheless, it is too young to have distinguishing characteristics, or even a coat-of-arms. Some information as to the character of the organization may, however, be gained from the fact that it is petitioning Lambda Chi Alpha. The other name for Alpha Theta Chi is "The Holy Order of the Friends of McGowan."

Some More Great

“Red” Harrell is next on the list;
On precision he’s known to insist.
Simple motion and stars,
Apparatus and Mars,
Are subjects he cannot resist.

We have a young teacher named Patch,
Whom the co-eds consider a catch;
He’s as neat as a pin,
But is sallow and thin;
Here’s the reason: He’s still an old “batch.”

A man whom we think is real bright
Is our dearly beloved Prof. White.
He knows English Lit.,
And has made quite a hit
In building the gym overnight.

Doc Mitchell, our leader of song,
Works math problems all the day long.
When freshies get gay
We then hear him say,
“Good gracious! This thing is all wrong.”

There is Sully of chemical fame,
Who has won for himself quite a name.
He smells of the gases,
Then takes off his glasses,
Repeating his same old game.

Our latest addition is Bowen;
We see him with countenance glowing.
When speeches he makes,
His Bible he takes,
Wherever he may be going.

A woman with "Olive" complexion
Speaks German and French to perfection.
Her pupils she busies
With numbers of quizzes,
And yet she retains their affection.

Prof. Sanders, our famous Rhodes scholar,
Is useful and bright as a dollar.
His students doth drench
With Spanish and French,
But they always are able to follow.

Coach Freeland, who's cheerful and fat,
And skillful at handling the bat,
Has helped our boys win—
Always hopeful has been;

"Specializing in SELZ SHOES"

In the policy which governs our relations with our customers, there are three principles which we believe are vital:

PRICE—The honest pricing of merchandise, to allow a fair profit, and no more;

QUALITY—Dependable goods, backed by the responsibility of a national manufacturer.

SERVICE—A sincere attention to the individual, which subordinates selling to service.

In putting these principles above all others, we must depend for success on your appreciation of fair dealing. Will you not give us an opportunity to vindicate our policy?

¶ This phenomenal record is the natural result of the high quality of workmanship displayed in all our publications, coupled with the very complete service rendered the Staff.

¶ From the beginning to the end we are your counselor and adviser in the financing, collecting, and editing of your book.
